About Me

UX and UI designer with a background in physical product design. I spent 4+ years in a fast-paced, client-led agency taking products from brief to market, and during that time completed the UX and UI Accelerator at King's College London (Distinction, 2024). I then moved into the agency's digital design team, working across user research, information architecture and interface design. The requirements were similar, real constraints, specifications and deadlines, but the finished outcomes were different
